

The Four Children: 5 Social Justice Inserts for Your Passover Seder

PRINT

Throughout our history, the Four Children of the Passover story have sparked conversation, artistic renderings, songs, debates, and more.

This year, whether you're doing a small home seder with your family or roommates, attending a virtual seder hosted by a congregation, or organizing your own virtual seder, consider adding in one of these inserts, which look at the Four Children through the lens of modern-day social justice issues.

Consider the following options from ReformJudaism.org and our partners.

1. The Four Children and COVID-19

As we grapple with a global pandemic, the struggle to find freedom from illness weighs heavily on our hearts and minds. How do we engage with our children when they ask about this crisis? Jewish facilitator Jordan Namerow shares thoughtful questions to spur timely conversations.

2. The Four Children of Climate Change

Compiled by Jewish organizations dedicated to climate justice, this guide helps us discuss the tension between our Jewish obligation to “till and tend” the earth, as God told humankind in the Garden of Eden, and the spectrum of beliefs that people hold about climate change.

137
Shares

